

Do you have questions about HPV and concerns of it progressing to cervical cancer?

HPV is a sexually transmitted infection. Certain types of HPV could lead to the development of cervical cancer.

A new clinical research study is being conducted in your area to evaluate a new experimental test that may detect different types of HPV from your cervical specimens.

You may be eligible to participate if you:

- Are at least 21 years of age or older
- Are at your doctor's office for your annual PAP exam
- Have not participated in a cervical disease diagnostic trial since 2007

Other requirements must also be met in order to qualify for this clinical research study.

If you qualify to participate in this clinical research study, you will receive study related medical care at no charge and you will be compensated for study related procedures.
